That's where Breakfast London comes in. This new book from food writer and London resident Richard Johnson is a comprehensive guide to the best breakfast spots in the city, as recommended by locals. With over 100 listings, the book covers everything from traditional English breakfasts to innovative brunch dishes and everything in between.

Johnson has spent years exploring London's breakfast scene, and he knows all the best places to go. In Breakfast London, he shares his favorite spots, including:

- The Breakfast Club: A London institution, The Breakfast Club serves up classic breakfast dishes with a modern twist.
- Dishoom: This Indian restaurant is known for its delicious breakfast dishes, including the bacon naan roll and the keema eggs.
- Granger & Co.: This Australian-inspired restaurant is a great place to get a healthy and delicious breakfast.
- Pollen Street Social: This Michelin-starred restaurant offers a sophisticated take on breakfast, with dishes like the smoked salmon and scrambled eggs with caviar.
- The Wolseley: This grand café is a popular spot for breakfast, lunch, and dinner. The breakfast menu features a wide variety of dishes, including the full English breakfast and the eggs Benedict.

In addition to these top picks, Breakfast London also includes listings for dozens of other great breakfast spots, from hidden gems to neighborhood favorites. The book is organized by neighborhood, so you can easily find a place to eat near your hotel or office.

Whether you're a local or a visitor, Breakfast London is the essential guide to the best breakfast spots in the city. With its comprehensive listings, helpful tips, and beautiful photography, the book is a must-have for any food lover.
