On a sun-drenched day in 1938, two legendary drivers, Tazio Nuvolari and Bill Lee, lined up on the starting grid of the Vanderbilt Cup race. Nuvolari, the "Flying Mantuan," was one of the greatest drivers of all time, known for his fearless driving style and unmatched skill. Lee, an American racing legend, was equally determined to win.

The race was held on a treacherous 26.8-mile course on Long Island, New York. The road was narrow and winding, with sharp turns and steep drops. The cars were powerful and unforgiving, and the speeds were blistering.

From the start, Nuvolari and Lee were locked in a fierce battle. Nuvolari led for much of the race, but Lee stayed close behind, pushing his car to the limit. The crowd roared with excitement as the two drivers traded the lead several times.

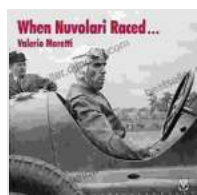

On the final lap, Nuvolari's Alfa Romeo developed a mechanical problem. Lee saw his chance and passed Nuvolari, taking the lead for good. Nuvolari fought back valiantly, but it was too late. Lee crossed the finish line first, winning the race by a mere 10 seconds.

The race was a thrilling spectacle, and it is still remembered as one of the greatest races in history. Nuvolari and Lee were both hailed as heroes, and their rivalry became the stuff of legend.

When Nuvolari Raced Bill Lee is a meticulously researched account of this legendary race. The book is filled with fascinating details and anecdotes, and it captures the excitement and danger of a bygone era of motorsport.

Whether you are a fan of racing, history, or simply great storytelling, When Nuvolari Raced Bill Lee is a book that you will not want to miss.
